QUEEN'S THEATRE ATTRACTION.

The lover of the weird and mysterious will find enjoyment a plenty at the Queen's Theatre this week. Carter, the magician, is there with a repertoire of psychic items that thrill, fascinate and amuse.

Carter, besides being a master of his art, is really funny. Holding spellbound attention for a time, he suddenly injects a humorous quip that convulses his audience. His offerings in clairvoyancy and prestidigitation are masterpieces.

The programme is made up of three parts, ending with a one act mystery playlet "The Lion's Bride." In this one act a beautiful young victim of a Maharajah is seen at the drop of the curtain shricking in the jaws of a real lion. Sharing the attention of the magician, Miss Evelyn Maxwell performed some remarkable work in telepathy. Before the curtain rose, slips were passed to the audience with requests that questions be written. The questions were retained by the writers. Later Miss Maxwell, blindfolded, entertained the audience half an hour by answering minutely, and accurately every query.

Four Chinese were fined $25 (with the option of 25 days) at the Marine . Court this morning for going on board the Blue Funnel steamer Diomed, in harbour, without, permission. A fifth, who should have appeared on the same charge, was absent and his bail of $25 was estreated. Three others, up for a similar offence on a coasting steamer were fined similar amounts, all of which were paid.

Giving its decision in the suit, the Court declined to make permanent the temporary injunction granted when the suit was brought after acceptance of the Dollar company's bid had been announced by the Shipping Board.

Counsel for the Pacific Mail Steamship Company announced their intention to appeal from the decision and the Court agreed to continue the temporary injunction until Wednesday (April 22 7); pending the filing of the appeal.

It is believed that the action of the Court in sustaining the decision of the majority of the Shipping Board may result in changes

In August 1916 Hindenburg was appointed chief of the general staff in succession to Falkenhayn, whose plans at Verdun and in the Trentino had failed. He brought with him his faithful lieutenant, Ludendorff, who was the brains of the combination, and probably knew it, for while in his book he praises his chief's "noble qualities of mind," his devotion to his king, and his readiness to assume responsiblity, he pays no tribute to his military qualities.

Nothing, however, was accomplished in the West, and the Somme battles, forced the Germans to retreat to the much-vaunted" Hindenburg Line," which was to be the ne plus ultra of the Allied advance. The story of how this line was gradually eaten into and finally broken belongs to history.

On October 3 Hindenburg embodied the views of G. H. Q. in a statement advising that the war should be brought to a close. After the Armistice he retained his chief command until June 1919. In the following July he wrote to Marshal Foch offering himself as a sacrifice for the ex-Kaiser. In November he gave evidence as to the responsibility for the war

Earlier Cables. Berlin, April 25. The German Government regards the situation in Bulgaria as most serious, especially the danger of intervention by Yugo-Slavia, which might easily lead to a Balkan war.

The German Foreign Office welcomes permission being given Bulgaria to increase her army, and hopes that Bulgaria wil thereby deal effectively with the Communist movement.

The agreements indicate an amicable settlement of the disputes which hampered attempts at rapprochement begun three years

An important factor in the conclusion of the agreements has been the nervousness of Central European states about the German proposals for a pact guarantee and Germany's reservations as regards her eastern frontier. The effect of the new development will probably be felt at the autumn assembly of the League of Nations: when the Geneva Protocol will be reconsidered.

The All Night Habit.

"Night Clubs, now receiving so mucho attention from the police, had their counterpart half a century or so ago in the "Night Houses' of the Hay-market (points out the Star.)

In those days all hostelries could, if they chose, close at 12 30' and re-open at one in the morning; and with some of the Night Houses even the half-hour closing was merely nominal, and did disturb favoured guests.

Provision shops and eatinghouses also acquired the all-night habit, and "Mother Dowling's," in St. Giles's, before it was swept away in the making of "New Oxford. Street, could boast of not having put up its shutters for over forty years.

"This fellow Skinner tried to tell me that he has had the same automobile for five years, and has believe that?"

"I'do," replied the thin man, Badly. "I am the man who did his repair work for him,"

MILLIONAIRE'S SPEEDY MARRIAGE.

When Jerome Hillborn, a millionaire wool merchant, started for Europe, he was single. On board the s.s. Aquitania was Mrs. Vanette MacMartin, widow of the late Donald MacMartin, cobait mining millionaire. Before the vessel reached England they were engaged. Mrs. MacMartin went on to Paris to see her son, in school there, while Mrs. Hillborn remained in London to arrange wedding plans. Then he flew to Paris, picked up Mrs. MucMartin and flew back to London, where the ceremony was performed in St. Martin's Church.

ENGLISH VISIT PLANNED.

The United States Army polo Club, in June, for the international Seventh Regiment Armory. title the Americans won in the first morning, and afternoon, befor series of games with the British leaving for Washington. Army four at Meadowbrook, in 1923. The team will be headed by Maj. L A. Beard, quartermaster corps, a veteran of the combination of two years ago and captain of the present team. The other players who will make the trip are Maj. A. H. Wilson, Capt. Charles Gerhardt, Capt. P. P. Rodes, Lieut. Eugene McGinley, and Lieut. J. A.

These players have been selected as the best possible material in the ranks of the United States Army, and their choice has been made only after a strenuous siege of training, which started at Mitchel Field, Long Island, last summer, and which ended with the winter campaign in Florida. Both Major Beard, and Major Wilson were members of the 'American' military four which defeated the British two years ago, but the other four members of the squad will be playing in international competition for the first time when they face the English horseman.

SPORT AND THE EMPIRE.

to time, an "anti-sport fiend," sometimes in the pulpit and sometimes outside of it, and those of us who follow sport are apt to become a little conscience-stricken now and then when we are charged with spending most of our time. money, and energy on games. An unfailing antidote for that guilty feeling lies in a consideration of the amount of good sport does in attaining that most desirable object, the -friendship of nations, and particularly the friendship between Britain and her Dominions.

The phrase "strengthening the bonds of Empire" is heard so often at all sorts of social and political functions that we have come to regard it as a platitude, and mete out to it the fate of all platitudes which is to be unappreciated, no matter how true they may be. Such has been its fate as we read it in the reports of the presentation ceremonies in connection with the M.C.C.'s visit to Australia, and it is only when one considers, that one in realises how true it is that the M.C.C.'s visit has strengthened the bonds of Empire. Some Canadians, was are being.

told, are thinking of seceding from the British Empire. The surest single preventive, more efficacious than all the efforts of politicians, preachers, or publicists, would be a tour of the Dominion on similar lines to the M.C.C. visit to Australia. There would never be a revolution in Britain, Bismarck 2 once said, as long as there was in racing. The theory can well be applied here, and the only difficulty is to get some sport common to the two countries. A football tour is almost the only one that would appeal, and it is a pity such a visit by a first-class British side could not be arranged.
